

Intent

Accent Antagonist Attitude is asking “How are you today?” which implies, infers and insinuates condescending negative connotations that you one the other was, is and should not be okay which is further quantified linguistically by pitch and speed of delivery “How are you, today?” Accent Antagonist Attitude is asking “How are you today?” which implies, infers and insinuates condescending negative connotations that you one the other was, is and should not be okay which is further quantified linguistically by pitch and speed of delivery “How are you, today!” Accent Antagonist Attitude is asking “How are you today?” which implies, infers and insinuates condescending negative connotations that you one the other was, is and should not be okay which is further quantified linguistically by pitch and speed of delivery “How are you today?” Accent Antagonist Attitude is asking “How are you today?” implies, infers and insinuates condescending negative connotations that you one the other was, is and are not okay quantified linguistically by pitch and speed of delivery churned out as an Accusatory “How are you, today?” Accent Antagonist Attitude is asking “How are you today?” implies, infers and insinuates condescending negative connotations that you one the other was, is and are not okay quantified linguistically by pitch and speed of delivery churned out as an Accusatory “How are you, today!” Accent Antagonist Attitude is asking “How are you today?” implies, infers and insinuates condescending negative connotations that you one the other was, is and are not okay quantified linguistically by pitch and speed of delivery churned out as an Accusatory “How are you today?”